

the massive walls. The gray towers and battlements, over which the union jack was flying at half mast, never appeared more impressive.

In the streets was a mass of people black with a lane kept open by two solid lines of soldiers for the cortege to pass through.

When the royal train arrived at the station the body of the monarch was again placed on a gun carriage and the procession was re-formed with the addition of the ambassadors, ministers and other representatives of foreign states. Thus it passed through the purple draped streets to the castle and into St. George's chapel.

The clergy who were to conduct the service were in the chapel when the cortege arrived. They were the archbishop of Canterbury, the archbishop of York, the bishops of Winchester and Oxford and the dean of Windsor, the three latter respectively the prelate, chancellor and registrar of the Garter.

The casket was placed on a purple catafalque before the altar which was fairly buried in floral pieces.

As the minute guns boomed, and the bells tolled, the casket borne on the shoulders of grenadier guards was placed on the catafalque.

The lord chamberlain and lord steward took positions at the right of the catafalque. King George as chief mourner stood at the head of the casket.

His majesty's body guard of gentlemen of arms stood at the left of the bier with axes reversed. The funeral party filled the edifice and overflowed into the Prince Consort chapel to the south.

THE SERVICE.

There was a moment of profound silence when positions had been taken and then the archbishop of Canterbury and the bishop of Winchester advanced to the casket and registry of the Garter.

The choir chanted "Man That Is Born of Woman," and the congregation recited the Lord's prayer, the low rumble of many voices being accompanied by Gounod's music. The service of the Church of England was followed through the anthem "How Blest Are They" was sung, after which the garter-king-at-arms advanced to the altar and spoke as follows:

"For as much as it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of this life unto his divine mercy the late most high, most mighty, most excellent monarch, Edward, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, emperor of India and sovereign of the most noble order of the Garter, let us humbly beseech Almighty God to bless with long life, health and honor and all worldly happiness, the most high, most mighty and most excellent monarch, our sovereign lord George, now by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, emperor of India and sovereign of the most noble order of the Garter. God save the king."

An answering murmur of "God save the king" arose from the assembly.

The archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the solemn benediction after which the archbishop of Winchester he knelt before the altar in a moment of silent prayer. As the clergy rose to their feet the hush was broken and the procession withdrew from the chapel in the order of its entrance. The body of Edward VII remained before the altar later to find a permanent resting place in the royal tomb house in Albert memorial chapel.

During the services in St. George's chapel, the widowed queen moved to the foot of the casket and knelt. At the conclusion of the service the casket was lowered to the crypt. Before this was done King George placed a small royal salute on the coffin.

Mr. Theodore Roosevelt was present, having a place among the members of the diplomatic corps and their wives. He was accompanied by Mr. Roosevelt, U. S. minister to the United Kingdom, and by Mr. Roosevelt, U. S. minister to the United Kingdom, and by Mr. Roosevelt, U. S. minister to the United Kingdom.

Although Mr. Newhouse declined to be quoted in the matter, he said that several others were giving the dinner with him and that he could not discuss what would be the result of the dinner before it came off. It is intimated, however, that promotion of business interests in Salt Lake would be fully discussed.

ANDERSON ON THE GRILL.

Silver King Con. Survivor Under Cross Examination by Dickson.

In the hearing of the Silver King Consolidated Mining company against the Silver King Coalition company this morning, Frank Anderson, survivor for the Consolidated company, was put through a rigid cross-examination by Judge W. H. Dickson, attorney for the Kearns people. Judge Dickson attempted to bring out that since Anderson left the stand a week ago he has been directed by the attorneys for the plaintiff to include certain parts of the workings connected with the Parson slope in his last calculations which had been excluded in the former calculations to obtain the volume of the cavity from which the ore was taken.

Judge Dickson declared that the figures were too high and had Anderson resurrect a number of old plots of cross sections made about a year ago to refute some of his own testimony. Anderson's testimony, however, was not shaken in regard to his estimates and he was on the stand during the afternoon session.

PAINTED LIKE INDIAN AND SCANTILY GLAD

Mrs. Jurisch Wanders Far From Home, Leading Little Daughter Likewise Decorated.

After painting her face, arms and shoulders, and dressing in garb of an Indian, Mrs. Ernest Jurisch, of 1031 West North Temple street, who has been failing in health for some time, wandered away from home Thursday afternoon with her daughter, 3 years old, whom she had similarly decorated. When Mrs. Jurisch was found near Hinkley's ranch at North Point near the Jordan river, she declared that she and her daughter were going to walk to Germany, her native country. The daughter, like her mother, wore no shoes or stockings, and was completely exhausted. The family at Hinkley's ranch persuaded the woman to stay all night at the ranch and she was given food and shelter.

Deputy Sheriff Axel Steel was detailed on the case in response to a telephone call from the ranch and she went out there this morning. He brought Mrs. Jurisch to the county jail where she is being held pending an examination as to her sanity. The child was left at the ranch and went out this afternoon and got his daughter.

Mrs. Jurisch wore a string of bottles around her neck, besides a number of other decorations. She experienced a similar attack a year ago and after receiving medical attention recovered.

Mrs. Jurisch was missed by her husband when he returned from work Thursday evening. He called up the neighbors but was unable to find a trace of her, and then began a search. For some time Mrs. Jurisch has been in ill health and in her mental aberrations has wandered away from home a number of times.

INDIAN TELLS STORY OF MURDER

Tom Rice Who Killed John Takes Stand in His Own Behalf.

SCENE IN THE COURTROOM

Interesting Sideights on the Efforts To Civilize the Noble Red Man On the Reservation.

Tom Rice, full-blooded Shewit Indian, accused of slaying John Rice, a fellow Indian, on the reservation near St. George on Dec. 11 last, told the story of the affray before a jury in the United States court this morning. Tom Rice is a splendid specimen of his tribe, large, strong and wiry, and according to the testimony of those who know him, he is a pretty good Indian as long as he leaves drink alone; but in his cups he is a notoriously "bad Indian." Some information as to the mode of life of the Indians on the Shewit reservation was given by the witnesses on the stand this morning during the progress of the trial of Tom Rice for manslaughter. It appears that the Indians live in houses, have housekeeping material and have adopted the ways of white people as far as possible, some of the women even having carpets on their floors.

According to the testimony of the defendant, which was given in very good English, he was defending himself when he struck John Rice with the ax. He said John came up behind him and struck him in the back with a club, and that the defendant then ran to the wood pile, with John Rice after him with an open knife in his hand, and he picked up the ax and struck his pursuer, and as John Rice dropped the knife and picked up a club he struck him again with the ax in the back. John Rice was taken into the house and such attention as was given him was given him. He lingered five days and died from the effects of the injuries on Dec. 18.

Tom Rice said he returned home from over the mountains early on the morning of Dec. 11, the day of the quarrel. He said he found another Indian, Will Carma by name, in the house with his wife, Alice Rice, when he broke open the door leading into the house. He first tried the kitchen door, and finding it locked, went around the door to the front door, which he broke open. He then went into the house and found Carma in the house with Alice Rice. He said Carma dashed past him out of the house, and he did not know the name of his wife, and became John Rice. Tom Rice had also adopted the name of Rice, and although the two men were of the same name, they were in reality of no relation to each other. Tom Rice said he had been engaged in work among the Shewits for seven years, in which time they had been taught to live in houses and to live like the white people. Mr. Foster is field manager of the reservation, and is engaged in civilizing the younger generation of Indians, meeting with excellent success.

DOMESTIC FRACAS.

Cross-examined by Asst. Dist. Atty. William McCreel, defendant admitted that he had kicked his wife, after Carma had fled from the house.

"You kicked her in the face, didn't you?" asked the prosecutor.

"Yes, I kicked her in the face," replied the Indian.

"Why did you kick her?"

"She make me mad, she have Carma in the house, and other time other Indians, I tell John she must never any more have Carma in the house."

Defendant admitted, too, that he struck Sally Rice, widow of John Rice, "Why did you strike Sally Rice?" asked Mr. McCreel.

"Because she curse me like hell," stolidly replied the defendant.

Defendant admitted he had been drinking. "I take one wine that morning," he said in reply to the question. He said that John Rice had been drinking rather heavily, and that Alice Rice and Will Carma had also been drinking. Defendant said he had been drinking several days before, at which time he chased Alice around the house. Recently he had been drinking. Defendant said that while John Rice was 75 years old and could not see very well, yet he, Tom, was afraid of him.

WIDOW TELLS OF MURDER.

Among the other witnesses called in the case this morning was Sally Rice, widow of John Rice, who said that she saw John Rice brandish the knife, and heard Tom say he wanted to fight with John. She said Tom Rice struck her for interfering in the quarrel. She said that John struck Tom first. Asked if she wished Tom to be acquitted, she said, "If he was it would not bring John back, and no one could fill his place."

Rose Foster, a rather comely Indian maid, told of hearing people shouting when the fight happened, but claimed she did not witness the encounter. She saw John Rice afterward with blood streaming down his face, and saw him after he died.

"Is he dead now?" asked the attorney for the government.

"He sure dead," replied the witness.

John F. Wasmund, superintendent of the Shewit Indian reservation, was the next witness. He said that after the fight Tom Rice left the reservation but was later found at Caliente. He sent officers to look for him, and he accompanied them himself. While on the way back to the reservation, Sup't. Wasmund testified, Tom told him the story of the fight, and that he told it to the jury. He said John was the aggressor, and that Tom told him he struck in self-defense.

AGENT WASMUND'S STORY.

Agent Wasmund said the Indians on the reservation live in houses, material for which was supplied by the government, and built by the labor of the Indians directed by the government representatives. There at the reservation, about 15 miles from the Shewit Indians, the tribe having divided to that number. He testified to having seen the body of John Rice, and to the wound in his head which caused his death.

H. M. Foster, Presbyterian missionary at the Shewit reservation, was the next witness. He testified that he had been called in after the fight and that he had carried the injured Indian into the house and applied such remedies as were at hand. The government, Mr. Foster said, maintained a supply of drugs at the agency, and in the absence of a physician, he did what he could to allay the sufferings of the Indians.

The case of the government was closed with the testimony of Mr. Foster. E. S. Frost, appointed by the court to defend Tom Rice, then made a brief statement to the jury, in which he said the defense would endeavor to show that Rice had committed the act in self-defense, that he was enraged by the fact that he came home and found another man in his wife's room, and that John Rice attacked him with a club and a knife.

At the conclusion of the testimony of the defendant, which occupied something over half an hour, and was corroborated by the testimony of Alice Rice, his wife, the court took a recess until 2 p. m. The arguments will probably not occupy more than an hour, and it is likely that the trial will close to the jury early this afternoon. It is not expected the jury will require long to arrive at a verdict.

WHITE MEN'S CUSTOMS.

Something of the mystery surrounding the possession of the same name by the defendant and the man whom it is alleged he slew was explained this morning by Mr. Foster, the Presbyterian missionary at the reservation, in an interview with a News representative.

Mr. Foster said it was the custom with the Indians, since adopting the ways of the white man, to take white men's names. Sally Rice, widow of John Rice, had been married prior to her union with John. Her former husband's name was Rice, and her second husband, whose name she did not know, took the name of his wife, and became John Rice. Tom Rice had also adopted the name of Rice, and although the two men were of the same name, they were in reality of no relation to each other.

TERRIBLE FATALITY ON UTAH RESERVE

Three Children, Named Hodgkinson, Burned to Death in Cabin—Parents New Settlers.

Mrs. Murdoch, who arrived yesterday from Theodore on the Utah reservation, to attend the wedding of her daughter, brought word of a distressing tragedy on the reservation involving the loss of the lives of three children, aged 1, 2 and 3 years, who were burned to death in a cabin on their land, and the father and mother, John and Mrs. Hodgkinson were away working at some distance when the cabin caught on fire. The three children, Afton, aged 4 years, a 2-year-old boy, and the baby, Melba, aged 8 months, were with them when the fire broke out. The boy was beyond aid, but the girl lived three days and the baby, four. All were brought down to Theodore and Mrs. Murdoch among others attended to their wants.

NEBRASKA COMPANY SUES STATE AGENT

Bankers Life of Nebraska Seeks Permit to Operate in Utah But Is Refused.

Denied by the state insurance commissioner a permit to engage in business in the State of Utah, the Bankers' Life Insurance company of Nebraska today filed a suit in the district court against George B. Squires, as insurance commissioner, to secure through the court the desired permit.

The complaint alleges that the plaintiff company filed an application for a permit with the insurance commissioner on Jan. 1, 1910, but was refused. It is recited that the insurance commissioner has the sole power, except as against appeal to the district court, to issue the necessary license to permit the plaintiff company to engage in business in the State of Utah, and the allegation is made that the commissioner disregarded the rights of the plaintiff and unlawfully refused the permit to the injury of the plaintiff.

CLEARING THE DOCKET.

In the criminal division of the city court this morning, 14 state complaints, charging misdemeanors, were dismissed upon motion of the prosecutor. The cases have been on the docket for several months. Complaints have disappeared, material witnesses are absent, and other matters have been settled out of court, so the cases were dismissed to relieve the docket of unnecessary burden.

WILL EARTH GO THROUGH THE TAIL?

Dr. Adams of Carnegie Observatory Thinks It Probable and Calculations Not Show It.

TAIL NOW IN EVENING SKY

If Atmosphere Is Clear Can Be Seen With Naked Eye Soon After Sundown.

Carnegie Observatory, Mount Wilson, Cal., May 20.—"It is not improbable that we will pass through the tail of Halley's comet, and our calculations do not show it," said Dr. W. S. Adams at 3:30 o'clock this morning, Pacific time. "When the tail disappeared below the eastern horizon it was long but much fainter than yesterday morning. It may have been passed through a portion of it, but that can only be determined by calculations. No unusual phenomena was observed during the night."

TAIL IN EVENING SKY.

Carnegie Observatory, Mount Wilson, Cal., May 20.—"Virtually all of the tail of Halley's comet has passed into the evening sky. What little remained this morning above the eastern horizon will have disappeared in the next 24 hours. That section of the tail remaining in the eastern sky early today stretched from the horizon to the Milky way, near the star Altair. It was much fainter than has preceded mornings. If the atmosphere is clear this evening the comet will be visible to the naked eye soon after sundown. Much of the tail will be seen in the western sky."

NO TAIL IN THE EAST.

Williams Bay, Wis., May 20.—Prof. F. B. Frost, in charge of the Yerkes observatory here, expects to make an observation of Halley's comet in the west some time shortly before night. Although cloudy skies prevented the making of any positive observations early today, Prof. Frost and Prof. E. E. Barnard, the comet expert, agree that there will be no display of the comet's tail in the east tonight. The scientists say the earth has either passed through the tail while clouds obscured the sky or that the tail curved to such an extent as to miss earth entirely.

IN COMET'S PATH.

Denver, May 20.—Dean Herbert A. Howe, of the University of Denver, says he discovered five new figures in the heavens this morning, in the path of Halley's comet. They were moving swiftly, vanished quickly and were so small that the dean does not attempt to explain them.

WIRELESS NOT AFFECTED.

New York, May 20.—The passage or near passage of the earth through the tail of Halley's comet, which some scientists of the world have feared would affect the wireless system, had not the slightest effect, according to reports from all parts of the world received here by the wireless companies. "Speaking wirelessly," said the manager of the Marconi company, "we don't know that the comet has a tail. It has not affected our system at all. Tests between New York, Washington and Chicago by wireless experimenters, showed no extraordinary atmospheric conditions, that interfered with wireless communication. All the operators were on the watch for 'celestial music,' but none was reported. The operators of the telegraph and telephone systems also reported no interference of any kind. The passage of the comet was an unknown quantity, and sun spots were expected. Appearance of sun spots and auroras and interference with telegraph service are sometimes coincident, but no unusual phenomena have been observed since Halley's comet came within the possible sphere of influence."

CONDUCTOR AND MOTORMAN'S BODIES CREMATED

St. Louis, May 20.—A conductor and a motorman were killed and their bodies cremated at 2500 yards of the railroad when a northbound Peoria sleeper on the Illinois traction system collided with a southbound electric freight train near Loveland, Ill., early today.

The conductor in the sleeper escaped with slight bruises. The overhead electric wires fell on the cars in the freight train and set fire to the wreckage.

WILBUR GLENN VOLIVA IS CLIMBING HIGH

Chicago, May 20.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to John Alexander Dowie, has placed himself in a position to gain the former high station of the lazar house by getting an option on the entire Zion estate from Receiver Thomas.

Following a futile attempt of 50 members of the anti-Voliva factions to obtain a court order from Judge Landis to stop the transaction in the afternoon, those who are investors in the Zion estate held a mass meeting in the evening and a remonstrance to Judge Landis of the United States district court was prepared.

"I now have entire control of the Zion estate by virtue of an option which has been accepted by Receiver Thomas," Voliva said.

According to an estimate made last December the estate is worth about $1,400,000. The property in the hands of the receiver includes: Three thousand acres of farm land; Eight hundred acres of lake front land; Two thousand four hundred city lots in Zion City; Contracts, notes and accounts valued at $120,000; Twenty residences in Zion City; Twenty business houses in Zion City.

BOOKS CARRIED OFF.

The annual inventory of the City library has just been completed. It disclosed the disappearance of nine books which had been carried off by a thief, as a number of works of fiction and children's books. Just when these books were taken it is impossible to say, but the librarian would be obliged if the hypotheater would be "seized with quills of conscience" and return the plunder. The valuable works of art are kept under lock and key as well as closely watched, so none of these are ever carried off.
